CATRON'S TALK TO THE WOOL GROWERS

at once and get out of the business.

How It Reduces Prices.

"Another thing about the tariff, as I said a while ago the wool is divided into three classes, the first class is the best and is worth twelve cents a pound, that is a very long texture class; the second class of wool is that class that is generally used for clothing, such as without duty in foreign countries is worth only four to six cents a pound; it is worth fourteen cents a pound in this country but none of it ever reaches over seven cents a pound in foreign countries. The third class of wool can be bought at four cents a pound in foreign countries. That is a wool every pound of which goes into clothing; every pound of it competes with yours, it helps to keep your prices down, by reason of the fact that the price of your wool is kept up by the price of foreign wool with the duty added entirely. Out of two hundred million pounds of wool introduced into the United States last year, 97 million pounds was third class wool; these are supposed to be the wools used solely for making carpets and rugs. I remember that in 1898, when the Dingley bill was being formed before a committee on ways and means in congress, these men were all found in the night against raising the price on third class wool, when that class of wool was used to compete with second class wool. All except a very small part of it, not more than ten million pounds, goes into the same business, into the same manufactory as second class wool.

Work Must Be Done.

"Your president said that your market had not been kept up quite as well as he would like; it has not been kept up on account of this particular class of wool, causing a loss of from two to three cents on every pound. I have dwelt upon this because I think it of particular importance. Go home and write to your friends in congress, or your friends who have got friends in congress, regardless of politics, and tell them the facts about this matter, and ask each one to write to his friends in congress to see that your interests are protected. Interested every member of congress, because I know there is hardly a man in this territory who has not some friend in congress or some friend outside of congress with whom he is a friend or member of congress and can bring to bear some influence. You have got to do it, protect your interests, there is no other way in which you can help to do it and you must adopt it; in my experience there, while I was a member and while I remained there at the passage of the Dingley tariff bill, I discovered that the western states, when it comes to a question of tariff on wool, exercise a greater influence in congress than any other state in the union; they actually take charge of the wool interest. So one of the senators from Montana, Mr. Mantle stayed upon the floor day after day, and night after night without sleep and without missing a night session, and stayed by the wool interests and made them bring their tariff out at last, and they didn't get what he wanted, because he worked to have them cut out all the third class wool.

Must Use Our Friends.

Now, send your senators to congress, I say senators, because you have got to be a state. Governor Curry said that we must see to the right of the territory to take on statehood; we must do it as far as we can in a friendly way, for we haven't the power to divest ourselves of the territorial garments and take on ourselves the gowns of full statehood. But we have the power to communicate with friends there whom we can ask to assist us; we can tell them that a hundred and fifty thousand people have come into this territory since the last census was taken, that not only would entitle us to one representative in congress, but two; statehood is needed because it is for the best welfare of this country. We could tell them of the great immigration coming in, the great tracts of land being taken up. Tell them of the mines being prospected and developed. Tell them of the great wealth being brought into the territory, and tell them of the people who are entitled to all of the benefits of the American citizen. Every benefit, is it true?

Statehood Coming.

"When you go to these people about the right of statehood, you will find that they are just like we are; they will give you the rights which you are entitled to, they are willing to do justice to you, they are willing to help you. We did not come here for the purpose of dissuading politics; but the next you get a chance, back it by putting senators and representatives in congress with votes there which means something for your welfare. It is for us to wake up and drive full force for that so as to accomplish it, now we have a man, a gentleman who is chief of our territorial affairs, who didn't come here for the purpose of getting an office; he came here as a poor boy without any object except to live and to get an honest living, he came here and he grew up with you; identified himself with you; George Curry is the only man who has ever been a fair representative of the governorship in the territory to which he belongs; he will help us try to take our ship of state into the harbor, and he will not be found sleeping Palmyra, but he will be a wide awake pilot and guide us into the harbor of statehood. We will enjoy all the rights of a state and of free American citizens, it is for you to wake up and you must act in accord, you must act in sympathy with each other for the territory has no representative there only a delegate who is no more than a territorial beggar. President Roosevelt will listen to the people, congress will listen to the people, the men who are there will listen to what you want, we must have statehood for New Mexico and for every citizen in New Mexico.
